KATHY'S BIO

Upon graduating from the University of Texas business school in the mid '90s, Kathy handled consulting engagements in high-growth, high-risk locations throughout Asia, Latin America and Europe for various tech clients. She then spent some time away from corporate life to raise her daughter, only to struggle to re-enter the workforce in the midst of the global recession in 2009.

After an arduous and difficult transition back to work, Kathy went on to hold leadership positions in small & large technology companies. She ultimately left the corporate world in 2018 to launch her own venture, sourcing independent designer & beauty brands from around the world for fashion-forward women.

As an entrepreneur, a working mom, and a long-time hiring manager, she understands the most critical steps in pursuing that next, great career adventure. Her approach is outcomes-focused, with clear and steady progression every step of the way.
